

Peru Only Question s Good Intentions

Foreign News Commentary

If Latin American governments were to sum up in a single sentence their feelings toward the United States, they could do it by recalling the proverb which says the road to hell is paved with good intentions.

What Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has been hearing on his learn-and-listen tour and what a critical document to be presented to President Nixon this week in the names of all Latin American foreign ministers, except Cuba, will say is being said more in sorrow than in anger.

Students and leftist violence which has marked the Rockefeller tour is something else. Its riots are in the past and it plays upon the sense of frustration and helplessness common across the borders both to the north and south in the face of the U.S. colossus.

With the exception of Peru's military government, no one in Latin America has questioned

U.S. good intent. Chile, to draw up their own list of the Alliance for Progress to which the United States has contributed a billion dollars a year in loans and grants since its beginning in 1961.

What has been questioned is the policies which have directed it.

There is, further, disappointment that not since its beginning has the continent as a whole been able to reach its development goal of 2.5 per cent per year against a population growth rate of around three per cent.

It was with a feeling both in Washington and Latin American capitals that the alliance somehow had stagnated that Nixon requested the Spanish-speaking New York governor to make his four-part tour and Latin American foreign ministers met at Vina del Mar,

Wanted By FBI

Benjamin Hoskins Paddock, an escaped federal prisoner, who reportedly has suicidal tendencies and is known to his associates as "Chromedome," "Old Baldy," and "Big Daddie," is on the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

He escaped from the Federal Correctional Institution at La Tuna, Texas, on Dec. 31, 1968, while serving a 20-year sentence for robbing a Phoenix, Ariz., bank in 1960. He had also been indicted for two additional Phoenix bank robberies in 1959 and 1960 but was not tried due to his other bank robbery conviction.

When arrested in Las Vegas, Nev., on bank robbery charge, Paddock attempted to run down an FBI Agent with his car. During an earlier arrest in Missouri, he was armed with a cleverly concealed snub-nosed revolver.

In addition to bank robbery, Paddock has been convicted of automobile larceny and confidence game.

A white American, born at Sheboygan, Wis., on Nov. 1, 1929, Paddock is 6'4" tall, weighs 245 pounds, has gray or green eyes, a large build and medium complexion. He is blond and balding but his head may be completely shaved. He may wear glasses or contact lenses and is an avid bridge player. He has been employed as a salesman, service station operator, promoter, electrician,

American Business Club To Host Pilot's Fly-In

The Clovis chapter of the American Business Club will host its third annual Pilot's Fly-In Sunday at the Clovis Municipal Airport.

The fly-in is for student pilots and private pilots, with free breakfast to all pilots landing at the airport. There will be a trophy for the pilot coming the greatest distance.

A number of displays will be set up, with new pickup campers, camp trailers, aircraft and model airplanes on exhibit, along with exhibits by local merchants and kiddie rides.

Breakfast will be served from 6:30 until 10 a. m. with lunch from 10:30 a. m. until 2 p. m.

At 10 a. m. the demonstrations and contests will begin. Remote control models will be demonstrated at 10 a. m. with a show by the Amarillo, Tex., Sky divers at 12:15 p. m. and again at 3:30 p. m. The spot landing contest will be at 12:30 p. m.

A ladies style show will be at 1:30 p. m. with a square dance on horseback at 2 p. m. The style show for men will be at 4 p. m. with awards and prizes given at 4:30 p. m.

The proceeds of the day will go toward physical therapy scholarships for handicapped children. The show will celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Clovis Airport.

The public is invited to come out and spend the day.

Chamber Wants NLRB Replaced By Labor Court

By FRANK SWOBODA
WASHINGTON (UPI) — "If you build a better mousetrap, the NLRB won't let you use it."

With this and other similar slogans, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce last week began its latest drive to push a labor law reform package through Congress.

Topping the chamber's priority list for labor reforms are the elimination of the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) and a change in the preamble of the National Labor Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act which it claims encourages unionism.

The chamber wants the NLRB replaced by a labor court.

Effort Not New

The effort is not new—the chamber has been mounting similar drives each spring for the last several years—but for the first time the political climate with its conservative coalition as a base may be getting ready to accept the idea.

It was the drive and the threat of a change in climate that prompted AFL-CIO President George Meany—on the eve of last November's presidential election—to warn:

"For the first time in history 35 major business groups—the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Retail Federation and others—have united in a single campaign to destroy the National Labor Relations Act as we know it."

Meany said the alliance was out to destroy the act to give "big business a free hand" in its dealings with labor.

Willing To Wait

With the Congress still firmly in the hands of the Democrats, however, there is little likelihood that any major labor reform laws could win approval. But the chamber is willing to wait.
